Moderato

1. Ever since sister Mary Ann took on with Mister Green,
2. Into the parlour once I went quite unexpectedly,
3. Now that I find that Mister Green is such a generous man,

I have had no complaints to make, I'll tell you what I mean:
Timothy Green was nursing sister Mary on his knee.
I shall go in the parlour just as often as I can.
Every time he makes a call, that's nearly ev'ry day,
Oh, it was fun, for, Mister Green, in jumping from the chair,

Both of 'em seem to look on me as being in the way,
Let go of Mary-down she flopped, and hurt herself some-where.

If I go in the par-lour when the pair of 'em are there,
Every day for hours and hours they in the par-lour stick,
I've been and gone and played a trick—I'm sorry 'pon my word!
Oh, it's a lark to see the way they both begin to glare;
Kissing and cuddling, 'pon my word, it fair gives me the sick!
I am afraid by now that something dreadful has occurred.

Mary she looks at Mister Green, and then he winks his eye,
They 'lly start just after tea, I hardly think it right,
I got a pound of cobbler's wax—they will be in a plight!

Look at me now! They've sent me out, I'm sure I don't know why!
I'd like to know just what they do till twelve o'clock at night.
I've put it on the sofa, and they're sitting there tonight!
There they are, the two of ’em on their own,
In the parlour alone, alone, alone!
They’ve given me half-a-crown to run away and play—
Li-ti-id-dle-dy! Hi-ti-id-dle-dy!

Hi-ti-id-dle-dy-ay!

Hi-ti-id-dle-dy-ay!
